To Whom It May Concern,

My first exposure to D&H Construction was in 1997 at the Amoeba Music Store project in San Francisco in the capacity as an internal construction consultant for Bank of America. I was impressed with D&H then as I am now.

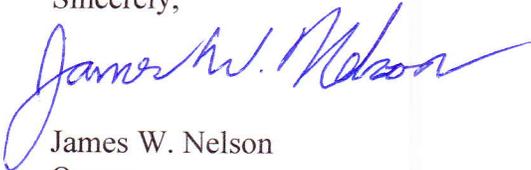

More recently I have worked with D&H on two large, complex rehab projects – the Eldridge Gonaway project in 2013 and the UACH project in 2014-2015.

All of the above projects were very challenging due to existing concealed conditions, changes in the scope of work, and fixed completion date.

The team at D&H Construction was able to meet all of these challenges and complete the work in a successful manner.

I look forward to working with D&H on future projects.

Sincerely,

James W. Nelson
